

It is wrong for the FCC not to allow satellite radio to broadcast locally. As an XM customer, I want access to local information without having to switch to local radio stations. The FCC should embrace new technology with the rest of America instead for fighting against it. The technology is here and it would counterproductive to stife it. Dont let special interest groups stop or restrict the follow of information because they are scared of the future. We (citizens of FREE America) deserve to have access to bigger and better things, and we should have the right to chose how we get news, weather, and traffic in our cars.

Thank you

Samantha Duke

Student at Indiana University